

Silicon Valley Bank

Our attention to detail and responsiveness inspired confidence in our clients that they were in a safe pair of hands.

Having been appointed as soon as Silicon Valley Bank identified its new London headquarters, we worked closely with the client to assemble the right team to design and deliver the required look and feel – a ‘tech’ aesthetic appropriate to the Shoreditch location, but with the gravitas associated with international banking.

The bank occupies 40,000 sq ft in the redeveloped Triton Court, now called the Alphabeta Building, on the 7th, 8th and part of the ground floor.

Sophisticated IT, AV and catering requirements – including a full commercial kitchen – have required careful co-ordination of specialist consultants throughout the design phase.

With key decision-makers based in the USA as well as in the UK, efficient and effective communication is at the heart of this project, engendering trust on both sides of the Atlantic.

“The team has been available and responsive throughout the project. They have taken the time to get to know us as a company and individually which has helped them to understand what we want to achieve, which makes us feel that we are doing this together as one team. Watts has been particularly impressive. We always feel they have our best interests in mind.”
